

THE W. REYMONT FOUNDATION

The Reymont Foundation, chartered in 1970 as a charitable organization, is active in the culture field. It is named after Wladyslaw Reymont, a popular and distinguished Polish writer who in 1924 received the Nobel Prize for literature for his novel, "The Peasants".

The Reymont Foundation is a charitable organization, whose purpose is to support and propagate Polish culture in Canada. The Foundation grants scholarships to students of Polish origin, organizes literary contests, gives financial help to organizations, schools and various Polonia groups and sponsors many functions whose aim is to preserve and spread Polish culture and tradition in Canada.

The continued success of the Reymont Foundation is dependent on private and organized donations, its own membership, and the continued support of the Polish Alliance of Canada, the original founder of the Foundation.
